My Last commentary from September 10, 2007 regarding the Syria Incident involving 8 Israeli fighter jets ended up with the below statement: "There is much more to be said about this incident ‐ however this is not the right time and the right place to do so…” In the meantime the World Press is releasing more and more details, so I guess it is safe on my behalf to comment on it and not to be regarded as "the first" to leak the info: It was a Nuclear facility that the Russian Anti-Aircraft system was there to protect. Iran I guess Inspired Syria. North Korea was there to supply the material, Russia was there to supply the defense and Iran was there to pay the bill to both. This is the Axis of Evil that will cause the Domino- Effect in the Middle East very soon…. The story begins in the month of July this year. A mysterious explosion is rocking the Syrian city of Haleb on July 26th while Iranian engineers and Syrian officers were trying to get a Warhead loaded with Mustard Gas on a new scud missile. The explosion killed 15 Syrian military men and dozens of Iranian engineers. North Korea has announces to the whole world its decision to suspend its nuclear program in return for billions of dollars. The only thing North Korea forgot to report is what its intentions are in regards to its already existing storage of weapon-graded enriched Uranium. The North-Koreans were approached by both Iran and Syria during last summer and in the most top secret levels there was the understanding that Uranium should be exported as an innocent cement cargo to the Syrian port of Tartous and from there by trucks to the Syrian desert where dozens of North Korean engineers, Iranian officials and Syrian military men were all around. Russia was part of this whole scheme as it was the one to supply the air defense system around this newborn nuclear facility. Let me make it very clear ‐ this was NOT a nuclear reactor. It was more dangerous than that. It was ready-to-go Uranium. Already enriched. Just put it into a bomb or a missile and there you go. The night between June 10-11 was a very exciting night for Israeli scientists as well as the intelligence community as the world's most advanced satellite "Ofek 7” was launched. The pictures were great to the degree of the size of a mosquito. There is no doubt that we are in major-league now! The moment the photos of the Syrian Desert arrived to the desk of the Israeli intelligence analysts it was clear as the sun that something is terribly wrong. We knew the North Korean connection for several years but there was yet no physical proof to the matter. President George Bush was informed immediately but was afraid that any exposure of this whole thing might disrupt the talks with North Korea. The decision was to try to get the right proof and even then to do everything to avoid the exposure of this whole thing to the world-media. A TOP- SECRET operation was launched in the middle of August. The Israeli commando wearing Syrian uniforms managed to get to the Syrian Desert and get a hold of a sample of the suspected material. Lab-checks proved beyond any shadow of doubts that the worse of Israel nightmares is right at our doorstep. ISRAEL IS ABOUT TO MISS DISTANT IRAN. NOW SYRIA IS ALREADY A NUCLEAR THREAT!! Time was running out and the drums of war started sounding their sound in the Middle East. In order to calm the Syrians and to let them think we are not at all aware of their vicious plan ‐ Israel started passing in the right channels calming messages that we have no intention to attack and that we are even willing to talk about the Golan Heights. After a green light from the white house (the state department by the way was not in the secret of the matter) Israel decided that the operation will be after mid-night no minimize casualties and to minimize exposure of cameras and civilians. The rest I guess is history. Syria was terribly embarrassed and the Israeli silence (which is a thing I must commend) added to this whole drama. Syria was in a great dilemma ‐ on one hand they can't expose the target and its content. On the other hand if they say nothing, then they will admit that there was something about it and by that will also open the door for other Israeli pin pointed attacks. The interesting thing is that the first to denounce the "Israeli Aggression" was North Korea! Syria was busted. The World knows it. Syria is now with its back to the wall. Any wrongdoing and Damascus will be destroyed. Buckle your seat belts! As I stated before: The next biblical event I can see that will be fulfilled is the below scripture: The burden against Damascus. "Behold, Damascus will cease from being a city, And it will be a ruinous heap. Isaiah 17:1 Syria will be dealt with first to cause the others to be exposed and then act in reaction with aggression! The escalation will most likely not happen before the coming US Presidential-Elections. America must first elect a president that will cause America to withdraw its troops from Iraq and then the mice will come out of their holes. Then I believe Ezekiel's Prophecy of Gog and Magog will be fully filled! Blessings in the name of Yeshua who will soon show His power and remove us from this evil world! In Him Amir
